Pretty Country Marriage.

A pretty marriage was consummated Tuesday morning at nine o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert House, a few miles south of Scotland Neck, when their daughter, Miss Emily Lelia House, became the bride of Mr. Charles Linwood Staton, a son of the late Elder W. F. Staton, the ceremony being performed by Elder W. B. Strickland, of Hobgood.

Immediately after the marriage the bridal party left on automobiles for Hobgood, where the bride and groom boarded a train for Virginia Beach. After being away about ten days Mr. and Mrs. Staton will return to Scotland Neck, where they will make their home.

The bride is a most attractive young woman and is very popular among her friends, while the groom is one of the town's promising young lawyers. They both have a large number of friends throughout this section, where they have lived all their lives, who join in extending to them their heartiest congratulations and good wishes.

In Another State.

A very much mused up citizen of the Sixth City rushed into the central police station on Tuesday evening and shouted aloud for vengeance, justice, or mercy at the very least.

"The automobile that hit me five minutes ago was No. 4144, Ohio," he sputtered. "It knocked me unconscious, but I got the number before I went down for the count. Put it on a piece of paper—4144."

"All right. What do you want?" "What do I want? Why, I can prove that he was exceeding the speed limit, and I want—I want—"

"Calm down, friend. You want a warrant for his arrest?" "Warrant nothing. What good would a warrant do me? He was going so fast, I tell you, that a warrant wouldn't get him now. What I want is extradition papers!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Will and the Way.

Stevenson knew a Welsh blacksmith who at twenty-five could neither read nor write, at which time he heard a chapter of "Robinson Crusoe" read aloud in a farm kitchen. Up to that moment he had sat content, huddled in his ignorance; but he left the kitchen another man. There were day-dreams, it appeared, divine day-dreams, written and printed and bound, and to be bought for money and enjoyed at pleasure. Down he sat that day, painfully learned to read Welsh, and returned to borrow the book. It had been lost, nor could he find another copy, only one in English. Down he sat once more, learned English, and at length with entire delight read "Robinson."—Lucy E. Keeler.

Inductive and Deductive.

Deductive reasoning is from theory to facts, while inductive reasoning is from facts to theory. Deduction is sometimes mere dreaming, oftentimes very foolish dreaming (as in the case of medieval scholasticism), while induction is the sane reaching out from particular facts to general laws (as in the case of modern science). Most of the things that have cursed mankind have come as the result of deductive reasoning; while pretty nearly all that has helped men has been the gift of the inductive process.

Bank-Notes Made of Silk. Bank-notes made of silk of a particular shade that will baffle the bank-note forger are now possible. As is known, most of the expert bank-note forgers use photography to obtain their best results; but a recent invention makes it possible to manufacture silk of a particular shade that cannot possibly be photographed.

Discovered by a woman, this invention is a new process for waterproofing fabrics without rubber and dyeing them in the same operation. Linen, cotton, or other materials to be treated by this process are placed white into one end of the machine and brought out at the other end a few minutes later colored, waterproofed, and dry. Fabrics so produced, the inventor maintains, can be used in hundreds of trades, from aeroplane building to bank-note making.

The Electoral College.

Hamilton says: "It was desirable that the immediate election of the president should be made by men most capable of analyzing the qualities adapted to the station. A small number of persons, selected by their fellow citizens from the general mass, will be most likely to possess the information and discernment requisite to so complicated an investigation." It is unnecessary to say that by imperceptible changes the spirit of the Constitution has disappeared, and that for generations the "electors" have been the mere automata by which the people register the result of their vote.

Extremes of Nervousness.

Baggs and Jaggs met, and Baggs and Jaggs got yarning. "I once knew a man, dear boy," began Baggs, "who was so ticklish on the soles of his feet that whenever he took a bath he had to walk about afterwards on a big piece of blotting-paper. It was the only method of foot-drying that wouldn't throw him into fits." "That's nothing, my dear fellow," retorted Jaggs. "I used to board at a place where the landlady was so nervous that whenever the wind blew she had to go out and grease the corners of the house, so that the wind wouldn't creak when it went round them."
